Chapter 1 by Andrew

He leaves through flames, ash flying through the air. He steps on the crushed bones of his enemies, with each step making a crack through the night. I hide breathless choking on fear and ash. I look at him and I know if I make a sound he'll kill me. He turns as if hearing my thinking and charges toward me sword point out. I start to run my feet bare, the bones hurt them, but mostly it is ash that protects them from being punctured. I run sweat dripping down my face then he is right behind me. He pushes me with all his might. I lie face down his sword comes do flat end first and then when he comes down for a strike I move kicking the sword out his hands, it lands in mine. He smiles under his mask of bones. I walk away with him, unknowing what will happen next.
